JUSTICES MUST BE LAWYERS

Tulsa, Okla., May 16.—According to section 1549 of the new Harris-Day code, recent compilation of the statutes of Oklahoma, today goes into effect the law that in none of the counties of the state of Oklahoma are any but qualified voters to be employed as deputies.

In Tulsa county, this will effect deputies in the offices of clerks, of nearly all of the courts, in the register of deeds' office and in various other offices to the number of eight or ten. Many of the deputies of the county offices all over Oklahoma are females and it means that all of these women will no longer be qualified to act as deputies, beginning with today.

Throughout the state, it is likely that more than 1,000 women will be disqualified from acting as deputies under the new statute effective today. The provisions of the statute, however, do not extend to female clerks, but only to those women qualified to legally act for their superiors.

There has been but little discussion of the new statutes, and it is doubtful if any of the county officials of the state have made preparations for the provisions.

Section 2053 also becomes effective today. This provides that all justices of the peace in cities in Oklahoma must be members of the bar, or duly qualified attorneys. This, however, does not affect any justice of the peace now holding office, but will prevent any person not an attorney from becoming a justice of the peace, beginning with this date.

Carry a Piece of Sheet Iron to Picnics

In a practical article on "Picnics and Campings," published in the June Woman's Home Companion, appears the following:

"Picnic cooking, if in inexperienced hands, will undoubtedly be better over a stove than an open fire. But you cannot carry a stove on a picnic or camping expedition; nor need you. A piece of thin sheet iron, thirty inches long by eighteen inches wide, is all the stove you want. This laid across two little banks of earth, with the fire between, or two logs with the fire between, forms an excellent stove, and not only makes it unnecessary to wait for embers for good cooking—since the flames cannot reach the food through the sheet iron—but is in itself an excellent grid for making toasts and flap-jacks."

The editor sincerely regretted that he was unable to accept an invitation from the Irving school to attend their May exercises this afternoon. Owing to the fact that Mr. Yeager left at 4 o'clock and there were some business matters demanding attention before he left, the editor could not well be spared.

Fremont, Neb., May 16.—The Nebraska grand council of the United Commercial Travelers met in this city today in annual convention. Preceding the opening of the business sessions there was a street parade of the delegates. The convention will continue over tomorrow.

COLORADO ENACTS ROAD LEGISLATION

Denver, Colo., May 16.—The Colorado legislature has enacted a new highway law which means the expenditure of over $700,000 on the part of the state alone in improving the mountain and plain roads of that state during the coming summer. This money given by the state to various counties is allotted those counties which will spend an equal amount with the state in improving their roads. The expenditure of this sum by the state therefore means that almost $1,500,000 will be expended for good roads in Colorado this year.

Particular attention will be paid to those roads leading into the state from Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma and states on the east. The roads leading across the mountains will be improved, and it is expected that the automobile visitors to Colorado will this year find better roads than ever before.

A recent law passed by the legislature of Colorado provides for a state wide automobile license tax. Visitors touring the state are however, allowed to travel for ninety days without the necessity of securing a license. One of the principal benefits to be derived by visitors under this law is the fact that now they will be allowed to use their cars in Denver, Colorado Springs, Pueblo and other cities without having to secure a separate license in each place.

The revenue derived from this state tax will be used for the improvement of Colorado roads. One half of the tax goes to the counties in which the cars thus taxed are owned, while the other half reverts to the state road fund.

For the benefit of those who intend to visit Colorado this year from other states the Colorado Good Roads Association is maintaining permanent headquarters in Denver. These headquarters are maintained for the purpose of furnishing information regarding Colorado roads and the various scenic routes through the mountains. Accurate data is being collected and the information thus secured is sent to all interested in Colorado.

Plans are now being made also for issuing a second edition of book entitled "Highways of Colorado." This book will give the official logs of the various routes in Colorado compiled from maps of the state highway commission. Other useful information regarding Colorado trips will also be given in this book.

Complete information regarding the roads of Colorado can be obtained by addressing the Colorado Good Roads Association, 312 Chamber of Commerce Building, Denver.

IMPORTANT MEETING

COMMERCIAL CLUB WILL MEET MONDAY EVENING TO CONSIDER INSURANCE SITUATION.

The Commercial Club will hold a special meeting at the city hall Monday evening at 8 o'clock for the purpose of considering ways and means of preventing a raise in the insurance rates of the city. Ada is short in fire fighting apparatus and unless steps are taken at once to remedy the situation, the insurance companies declare they will raise the rates considerably above the present level. Such a move would mean thousands of dollars to the citizens of Ada. Scarcely a person carrying insurance but would feel the effects of the raise and something must be done at once if the proposed raise is staved off.

This meeting is open to everybody and should be attended by all who have any interest whatever in better fire protection.

CAMP A. P. STEWART IN READINESS FOR VETERANS

Chattanooga, Tenn., May 16.—The work of erecting the tents at Camp A. P. Stewart has been completed, and a most attractive spectacle of camp life will greet the veterans when they arrive here for the Confederate reunion May 27-29. About eleven hundred large pyramid tents are so arranged in Jackson Park as to form a beautiful picture. The large mess tent and the kitchen equipment are all completed.

Prominent ex-Confederates who have visited and carefully inspected the arrangement and general equipment of this camp pronounce it the best in the history or reunions. Nothing has been overlooked in the arrangement or general equipment that could add anything to the health and comfort of the veterans. From all reports it will go down in reunion history as the model camp.

The M. E. church south has an organized choir and invite every one that can sing to come and help them out.

"The Ideal Moving Picture."

Under the heading "Moving Pictures Improving" in the editorial columns of its April 5th issue, the Wenatchee, Wash., World has this to say:

"Last night we say at one of the local theatres what appealed to us as the ideal moving picture. It was a two-reel drama entitled 'The Redemption.' No sermon ever preached a greater lesson morally; no climaxes were ever built up more effectively; nothing of more gripping heart interest is imaginable. The audience was worked up to fever heat of interest. The acting was masterful and the technique superb. The photography was faultless. It was a triumph." At the Majestic this evening.

JAPAN'S BLUFF.

It is not without significance that Japan has always set her face inflexibly against the ownership of land by foreigners. Even a permissive bill, so worded as to be almost an evasion of the rights it professed to grant, has been repeatedly shelved. It is also to be remembered in this connection that Japan prohibits the employment of foreign laborers and prohibits foreigners from engaging in agricultural pursuits. On the other hand, the land policy of America is, as expressed the other day by a Japanese contemporary, "liberal beyond the wildest dreams of the Japanese." There are no restrictions against foreigners buying or leasing land, and America is far too interested in agriculture to prohibit cultivation by any foreigners who care to indulge in it.

The case standing as it does, it is very difficult to see upon what grounds the Japanese ambassador at Washington can make protests against the bill now before the California assembly. The protests already made have been largely in the nature of bluff, for if the American secretary of state were to ask, "What is the policy pursued in Japan with regard to the ownership and the cultivation of land by foreigners?" the Japanese ambassador would have some difficulty in "saving face." The opinion of a foreign office official published yesterday is more pessimistic than is usual in utterances of the sort, but substantially defines the hopelessness of Japan's position. The "no room" theory has come back on Japan rather badly. Had she adopted the same liberal policy as America, there would be something to offer in coming to a compromise; but she has not; she has pursued the narrowest possible land policy, with the result that, confronted with a narrowing of America's land policy, she finds that there is "no room" for reciprocal negotiations. She is hoist with Count Komura's own petard.

Whether it is wise, or liberal, or even just, of California to take these measures which, as President Wilson says, seem to be directed against the Japanese, is another matter. The Kokumin had some very angry remarks to make on the subject, complaining that every quarrel during the past 20 years has been of American manufacture. But this is professionally not a national quarrel at all, but merely a question of the interpretation of treaty rights. And Japanese statesmanship must answer to Japanese public opinion for the peculiarly short-sighted policy which has consistently denied to foreigners rights which could never have been used except in a trifling degree, and so left Japan without a single argument against the abolition of privileges which are vital to hundreds of thousands of her nationals abroad.

The Kokumin is possibly quite right as to the economic value of the Japanese in California and their commendable civic qualities. It is likely, too, that were they left alone in unrestricted possession of the land they acquire, they would in a generation be good Californians and forget their Japanese origin. But these are matters in which only the Californians have any right to judge, and the Kokumin cannot discredit an act threshed out in both houses of the legislature by describing it as the trick of a labor faction. Good or bad, each act represents the decision of the representatives of a very wide-awake people. On this occasion they appear to have decided against the Japanese. It may be a deplorable error, but there is nothing in any treaty that can be summoned as a deus ex machina to bring them to their senses, and the one reprisal which Japanese politicians so far have been able to devise is to boycott an exhibition—an eloquent comment on Japan's method of interpreting treaties.

If the omissions in the treaty which leave Japan dumbly impotent in the face of California exclusionism were deliberately made, they can only have been by Japan, with an eye to the continuance of the domestic policy to which she has always persistently clung.—Japan Chronicle, Kobe.

CENTPEDE GIVES FAMILY A SCARE

Wednesday night Jack Moore and family were considerably agitated for a time by the invasion of a centipede. The deadly insect was first seen by their little daughter, Violet, as it passed a few inches from her foot. The intruder headed towards a closet and Jack stopped his progress by placing his foot on him, holding him until some one could bring him a weapon of some sort. He says the centipede was fully seven inches in length.

Mr. Morton Begins 90th Year.

New York, May 16.—Levi P. Morton, former vice president of the United States and for nearly half a century a leading figure in American banking and financial circles, entered upon his ninetieth year today, having been born May 16, 1824. There was no observance of the anniversary, owing to the state of Mr. Morton's health. For many weeks past the venerable banker has been confined to his bed and for days his condition was reported to be extremely critical. Of late there has been some slight improvement in the condition of the patient, though the physicians in attendance do not hold out any hope of a complete recovery, owing to Mr. Morton's advanced age and the nature of his illness.

"This Is My 54th Birthday"—Cyrus H. McCormick.

Cyrus H. McCormick, who for many years has been a leader in American industries and also a figure of prominence in various political and public movements, was born in Washington, D. C., May 16, 1859, the son of Cyrus Hall McCormick, the inventor of the reaping machine. Young McCormick received his education at Princeton University. After his graduation in 1879 he became connected with the McCormick Harvesting Machine company at Chicago, serving in various capacities until his father's death in 1884, when he became president of the company. When the company with other harvester manufacturers, consolidated their interests in the organization of the International Harvester Company in 1912 Mr. McCormick was elected president of that company.

How to Quiet a Ticking Watch.

In the June Woman's Home Companion appears a page called "The Exchange" which consists of practical household suggestions contributed by subscribers. Following is one of the suggestions:

"The ticking of a clock or watch in a sick-room is often most trying to a nervous person. To obviate this turn a tumbler over a watch on a chair or table beside the bed, and the sound of the ticking can no longer be heard."

SMOKESTACK OF ELECTRIC POWER PLANT DOWN

Late Thursday afternoon the smoke stack of the power plant of the Ada Electric & Gas Co. fell down as the result of a stake to which a guy wire was fastened breaking off at the ground. The wind was coming from the southeast at the time and most of the strain was on that particular stake. The stack fell across the roof of the rear room of J. M. Keltner's wholesale grocery, caving it in at two or three places.

Fortunately for the light and power service, the company recently installed a blower and with this a draft can be maintained that enables the fireman to keep a full head of steam. The damaged smokestack is being repaired and will soon be in commission again.

Mr. Lasater stated that they had an excellent camp equipage and lots of implements for ensnaring the denizens of the water; also a good supply of initiative and referendum and other fishing accessories.

CAPITOL COMMISSIONERS FINALLY SELECTED

Oklahoma City, Okla., May 15.—Only two technical roll calls now stand between the capitol appropriation bill with its provision naming W. B. Anthony, P. J. Goulding and Stephen A. Douglas, as the capitol commission, and complete ratification by the legislature.

The commissioners were selected and confirmed by both houses Thursday. The bill is now technically in conference and the formal report of the conferees must be approved by both houses before the bill is finally passed, and ready for the governor.

The conferees will merely insert the names of the three commissioners chosen Thursday and adjust the minor differences between the house and senate upon a few points, the most important of which was the senate amendment putting the salary of the commissioners back to $3,000 per annum. The house passed the bill with the salaries at $2500. Both houses are expected to vote upon the conference report Friday.

"I did, but girls like to get to a new place. They're not looking for anybody, but the wider your territory the more certain it is that lightning will strike you."

"You've had a pretty wide territory," was her father's dry rejoinder. "But I always ran for cover when I saw a storm coming."

"I thought you'd come home engaged to a duke or a count at the least. Didn't you see any men you liked?"

"I liked them all, father, but I haven't seen a foreigner I'd marry. They're nice enough to talk to and dance with and to bring an ice at a ball, but no more than that. But nothing worries me; I'm going to stay here and keep house for you."

"It ain't much of a house, Gloria. You see, I ain't ever had any women folk around here, and the place 'bout runs itself, 'cept what the niggers do. You won't like it, I'm afraid."

"I'll like it well enough. You don't know how I've envied other girls their homes."

"I tell you what you do. Go on to California now—I'll go with you, if you say so, and stay till you get settled with some of your friends. Then I'll come back and have the house fixed up so's when you come again it'll be just what you want."

Kerr felt that if he could get her away he could see to it that she did not return, even at the cost of his leaving Belmont a year or two sooner than he had planned. To this suggestion Gloria did not accede. There was her curiosity about Belmont and her desire, something one who felt there was no depth to her nature could not understand, for a home.

"What! go away and miss all the fun of fixing up the house!" she exclaimed. "No, sir, daddy. I'm going to stay right here and make pies in the morning, have teas in the afternoons and go to the theaters at night. And you're going with me." Kerr made a deprecating gesture, but she quickly overruled him. "Don't say a word. You're going, and tonight's the night we start. We're going to the theater tonight."

Then Gloria told of a girl she had seen on the train who had come to Belmont to a theater party. She explained to her father that no occasion would give her a better opportunity to see the Belmont of which she was to be a part than that offered that evening. In all likelihood she would meet a number of persons between the acts. From her point of view she suggested so many good reasons that her father was afraid to interpose any objection at the time.

The arrival of Gloria's trunks put an end to further conversation, as she went to superintend their unpacking. Long after she had gone, David Kerr sat gazing into the fire. Many a time he had sat in that room and planned each move of a political campaign from its inception to final victory and had seen those plans carried out to the letter. But here was a campaign, if he should undertake it, which would be different. He would not be fighting on his own ground where he was sure of himself; and into it would enter those women.

Kerr was proud of his daughter. He recognized that she deserved to associate with the best families. If she was to remain in Belmont he would see to it that she had a social position which would be above cavil. This much decided, there came the question of how it could be brought to pass. The fire had burned low in the grate before he had considered all sides of the question. When he rose from his chair and went to the telephone he had determined upon the only course which would have as its result the launching of Gloria as a debutante in Belmont's exclusive circles.

Great was the surprise in the box office of the Belmont opera house when there came from David Kerr a request for a box. He telephoned to set it aside for him, that he did not know whether or not he would use it, but that he would send a check for the amount in the morning. The much flustered treasurer stammered that he would be most happy to put the box at Mr. Kerr's disposal and have him as a guest of the theater, but Mr. Kerr inquired the price of the box and closed the conversation by repeating that he would send a check for the amount in the morning. And great was the surprise of the servants when at dinner the master of Locust Lawn appeared in evening clothes.

CHAPTER II.

The English surpass Americans in at least one respect; they have learned as a nation far better than has this newer country the possibilities of a dinner party. Perhaps it is their higher developed social system, more likely it is the general interest which is taken in governmental questions, which gives the dinner table an important, if unofficial, place in political life. A brilliant hostess, with heart and soul wrapped up in her husband's advancement, can do much to aid him as he toils up the ladder of political preferment by gathering at her board the leaders of her husband's party and also prominent men of the opposition. One need have only a superficial knowledge of American politics and American leaders to understand why this is not generally possible here. But there be some here, taking a leaf from England's book, who make the dinner party serve purposes not apparent to all the guests. Judge Amos Gilbert was one of these.

Fond, ambitious mothers held up to their sons as an example the rise of Amos Gilbert from a humble home in a frontier village to a position as the leading corporation lawyer of Belmont. He represented the electric light company, the street railway company, the water company and the stockyards company. A person with an analytical turn of mind, after studying a list of his clients, might remark that each and every one, individual, partnership or corporation, could be favored by some political turn or damaged by some political machination. They found it better to employ Judge Gilbert than to trust to luck that all would go well.

All day Judge Gilbert had been trying to get in touch with David Kerr by telephone. "Kendall, who represented the Chicago packers, had been called back to that city and was anxious to see Kerr before he left that night. Failing in this, Gilbert could make no definite promise as to Mr. Kerr's attitude on certain propositions set forth by the astute Chicago lawyer. On his own authority he did say, however, that the master of Locust Lawn was interested in watching the Belmont News develop its new policy under the new owner and editor who had managed to secure control of the sheet without Kerr's know-edge. That Kendall might see for himself and meet on friendly ground the new and disturbing factor in Belmont politics, Judge Gilbert invited Joe Wright, the new owner of the paper, to dinner. It was just by accident, apparently, that Mr. Kendall had been picked up at almost the last minute.

"We're Going to the Theater Tonight."

The only others present were Dr. and Mrs. Hayes. Sam Hayes, a rising young physician and surgeon, was cornered of Belmont county, an office which his society friends joked him about, but one which Hayes recognized and accepted as a political stepping stone. Then, too, it gave him opportunities to repay his political friends. David Kerr liked to have such young men hold office.

Dinner over, Gilbert and Kendall withdrew to the library for a final conference over the stockyards situation. Again they tried to telephone David Kerr, only to receive the information that he was not at home.

"You really think the Belmont News having been bought by this outsider," queried Kendall, "puts a different aspect on the present situation?"

"Judge for yourself," answered the Belmont attorney. "I had Mr. Wright to dinner tonight so that you could meet him without arousing his suspicions. I wanted to help you that much."

What Kendall really thought he evidenced by his indirect reply.

"I don't blame Dave Kerr for being angry because Wright slipped in and bought the paper."

For a minute or more the two men smoked in silence. Kendall was wondering what he could say to his Chicago principals which would make them understand that Belmont was not now the Belmont of the old days, that although to all appearances it was the same the practiced eye could detect the vague unrest which pervaded it.

Judge Gilbert had been too long in the harness to wince at a corporation request for the vacation of a principal thoroughfare and a public park, but he was tired of the long fight for grasping masters whose one demand was always for more, more, more. And yet he had no sympathy with such men as Joe Wright. He had made up his mind, however, that he would not aid the company in this new franchise grab. He was partly led to this conclusion, all unconsciously, because he knew David Kerr was not betraying any interest in it.

"The river eats up our tracks on the west," protested Kendall. "The stockyards'll never be safe while we depend on the one line." Then he added with emphasis, "We must come down Maple avenue on the east and use Benton Park for switching yards."

"It can't be done."

"It can be done. Dave Kerr can do anything he pleases. He's the absolute boss of Belmont."

This was said with such a tone of finality that Judge Gilbert saw no need of replying. He knew that Kerr was the absolute boss of Belmont. There flashed through the minds of both men the thought that the Belmont News might have something to say. It couldn't prevent a franchise being passed, of course, but publicity at times was unpleasant. This was something Kerr did not court, Gilbert knew. He was the easy boss, letting every one have a share of the spoils, and thus all were satisfied. Few indeed had been the times when the town had attempted to revolt.

"You'd have the whole town up in arms," remonstrated Gilbert.

"They've been up in arms before. Once they brought ropes to hang the council, but Kerr put through the water works deal. You're the attorney for the street railway company; you know what he did there."

"Yes, yes I know," Gilbert admitted hastily. Then with a sigh of relief, "That's all past."

He ran his hand through his hair, gray long before the frost of age could come to silver it, and was thankful that such episodes were things of the past. He was weary of it all. Kendall's next remark, delivered with the chill incisiveness of a lawyer cross-examining a belligerent witness, brought him once more to the defense of the man who had made his success possible.

"I have Kerr keeping out of the deal only through fear of young Wright and the Belmont News?"

"He isn't afraid of anything. Mr. Kerr merely says that it doesn't interest him at the present time. As for me, I'm out of it."

"You're still Kerr's right-hand adviser."

"Pardon me, his legal adviser." Kendall did not pause to acknowledge the distinction, but went on, this time straight to the heart of the matter.

"I made what the stockyards people consider a good offer. If that isn't enough, what's his price?"

This point-blank question irritated Gilbert. He much preferred to call a spade an agricultural implement even when talking with those who stood close to him in his manipulations for the various corporations he represented. He therefore ignored the question, preferring to tell why the matter could not be taken up at present.

"The election's coming on in a couple of months, and your franchise would be made an issue. We can't afford it with the News in a position to boost the opposition party."

"I've got to get it through as soon as possible. There's nothing raw in this franchise, is there?"

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

Bro. Molloy, the Presbyterian pastor, conducted our chapel exercises Wednesday morning. He gave us an interesting and instructive talk, which was appreciated very much.

The High school pupils are working faithfully on their cantata, Sylvia, which is to be given one night next week. Sylvia promises to be a great success, much better than anything the H. S. has presented before. Don't miss it.

The physical geography class took a stroll over the hills, Wednesday afternoon, in search of vegetable and rock formations.

Final examinations begin Monday morning lasting until Thursday.

The High school pupils will be dismissed early this afternoon in order that they may attend the May day program given by the Irving school pupils.

The teachers of the grades will have some of their pupils work on exhibit in their rooms next week. The patrons are invited to come Thursday evening and look over the work.

The ninth grade class went on a picnic Wednesday afternoon. Miss Lucas chaperoned the crowd. They report a jolly time and arrived home just before the rain.

Among the High school students who have left recently are Miss Sadie Dodson and Mr. Leo Braley.

A Denatured Bull Fight.

Spokane, Wash., May 16—"Denatured" bull fights will be staged next September at Alan, Idaho, 25 miles east of Spokane. There will be real bulls and real Mexican matadors and picadors, but there will be no blood shed by either man or beast, barring accidents.

For the bulls' horns are to be covered with round knobs of padding, and the matadors will make their thrusts with wands having pneumatic attachments at the ends that will make them stick to the beasts without so much as ruffling the bovine hides.

After the bull-fighters have grown weary, the judges will give a decision as to whether any thrust with the wand might have proved fatal had a sword been used.
